Hey Kathy!
We're gonna have fun this next semester I hope it's gonna be a lot of work. Have fun this summer and don't change. You're one of the best ways you are
Adios
Lots of Love

Cathy,

We had a lot of fun this year (all the way from the Toilet door to the weird Swedish letter). Remember our theme song from lunch last semester? ("Here comes Santa Claus") What will we ever do for fun if KG leaves? Did you ever find your little bikal? (He looked just like you!!) Don't think next year will be ~~big~~ BAD SENIORS! Well, I'll suppose it year (in classes & lunch both o hope!) good luck. Love ya, Susie '72

Expression

AWARENESS

For you . . .

Finding himself in the fast changing world of today, the NHS student had to extend himself beyond his own bounds into the realm of other people. No longer could he believe that his way was the only way. Within a community of so many varying behaviors, he had to be open to new opinions, new concerns, and new ambitions. Only through individual expression of these divergent ideas and compromise among those involved, was change made reality, theory made fact, and tomorrow made today.

And others . . .

Bridging the gap . . .

Because of varying viewpoints and actions on the part of NHS students, conflicts arose throughout the school year. The familiar "gap" ranged from as simple an argument as one over midi-maxi wear to more complex problems of pollution and race relations. Contrast was evident in teacher-student, black-white, old-young, and liberal-conservative situations.Some actions only widened the margin of understanding, but a majority of the actions proved gaps are bridgeable.

Being aware of differences . . .

Many means of personal expression were evident throughout the year. Realizing these differences among people and accepting them was a step toward awareness.

Involved NHS students accomplished this in their participation in activities. The only differences were in the fact that some were journalists, some dramatists, other athletes and still others musicians; but they were all Northwest students showing concern for their school.

However, there were those who chose not to participate. To urge students to be more involved, the Student Council established a committee to promote better school pride and to improve relations among all students—involved or apathetic.

Opening your mind...

To some of the 2700 member student body, ideas were presented in a not-so-outright manner as with the mysterious appearance and disappearance of a free press. Subtle attacks on pollution and an open attack on vandalism characterized a few of the efforts of the NHS youth.

Various methods for improving school pride and spirit could be seen with the initiation of a Homecoming Spirit Contest. Showing their concern for others, NHS students contributed to needy families' Thanksgiving dinners. Being spectators or competing in sports or the Little 500 helped to bring about a oneness to the school.

With the advent of a new dress code, students put change into effect. The administration and Student Council, armed with opposing ideas, together revised the code which allowed girls to wear slacks. Through conflict and compromise, change was effected; awareness of others was accomplished.

Second Little '5' successful race, fund raiser

Northwest's second annual Little 500, the biggest stadium fund-raising event of the year, was a big success as bicycle and tricycle teams pedaled their way to victory.

The 15-mile bike race was modeled after Indiana University's Little 500. The girls used university-loaned tricycles for the contest. Three official 500-Mile Race pace cars opened the event.

Out of 24 entries, Team No. 10 took first place in the boys' bike race with a winning time of 49:57. Trophy-winning members were Jim Hanna and Mark Haygood, juniors, and Greg Westrick and Joe Winegard, sophomores.

Members of the girls' Team No. 36, Vicki Berry, Gretchen Burkett, Diane Miller and Janet Strouse, '70, and Laura Carnagua, junior, won in the girls' trike race.

Debbie Hopton, '70, was crowned the first Little 500 Queen.

A victory dance on the mall followed the races. The Lynx, a group from Washington High School, provided the music.

'Crystal Blue' theme creates romantic mood

"Look over yonder; what do you see . . .," came the sounds of "Crystal Blue Persuasion," the theme of the 1970 Junior Prom.

A white footbridge, crystal blue flowers, and a white dove against a blue sky decorated the cafeteria to set the mood for the 144 couples who attended the May 9 event. Music was provided by the Northwest Dance Band.

Members of the Junior Class served on the decorations, tickets, programs, refreshments and publicity committees. Chairmen of these committees were junior Student Council members.

Pioneers broaden experiences with summer activities, travels

Foreign or local travels—it made no difference. All that counted was the impressions Northwest students received and created during their summer activities.

Seniors Debbie Baron and Mary Huber broadened their traveling experience with trips to Europe. Debbie, as a member of the American Youth Symphony and Chorus, toured twelve European countries during the span of one month. During her stay in France, Mary Huber expanded her knowledge of the French customs and language by participation in the I.U. Honors Program.

Cheerleaders and Silverettes attended workshops at Vincennes University while journalists attended I.U. and Ball State workshops.

Various activity increases spirit of Homecoming

There was much enthusiasm at Northwest's second football homecoming on October 16.

School spirit was raised by the traditional selling of mums by the Student Council Homecoming Committee. Also, the Future Teachers of America Club sponsored a contest to have each homeroom decorate their section of the halls to show their school spirit.

Julie Evans, last year's queen, crowned the 1970 Homecoming queen, Marlene James. The queen and her court, Brenda Baird, Chris Hazzard, Jerri Ringenberger and Nikki Samper, seniors, were escorted by boys chosen by the committee.

After the game, students danced to the beat of "The Misters" in the cafeteria at the first football Homecoming dance.

Thinking not only about their half-time performance, but also about the game's outcome, NHS Band and Silverette members shiver as they wait for the next team move.

Junior homeroom members Mike Hartley and Jerry Heffley tape up part of their entry in the FTA contest for homecoming spirit.

NHS footlights focus on lyrical "Oklahoma!"

"The state may be OK, but the play is great!" So read signs advertising the Pioneer Players' spring musical, Roger and Hammerstein's "Oklahoma!" which dealt with the conflict of ranchers and farmers and resulting romantic involvement.

Starring in the musical, first produced on Broadway in 1944, were Debbie Baron as Laurie Williams and Steve Deer as Curly McClain. Miss Phyllis Walters directed the presentation adapted from the stage play "Green Grow the Lilacs."

To give the production a professional touch, a "Surrey with the Fringe on Top" was rented from a Zionsville resident. More time was devoted to choreography with dance routines, including a 15-minute number, "Dream Ballet," directed by junior Suzanne Mormance.

"Oklahoma!" was presented in two performances, March 11 and 12.

Sports

Competition in sports was extended beyond the conventional interschool program which attracted dedicated athletes who participated in an organized or individual effort for the school.

This year intramural basketball and girls gymnastics programs were established for the person who wanted to have exercise and fun along with the spirit of competition among classmates. The success of the programs unlocked possibilities of further expansion of intramurals.

Varsity squad records close season with many 1-run losses

Returning lettermen played an important role in the Northwest varsity baseball squad's improved season. According to Coach Don Stone this '69-'70 varsity team hit, ran and fielded better than in previous seasons. The varsity nine lost many of their games by one run. With Ken Stout and Bill Dunham as pitchers, the squad closed the season with an 8-11 record.

The junior varsity team displayed strength both in pitching and hitting. On the mound for the reserves were Mark Moore and Rodney Davis, sophomores. Led by the performances of Dale Byard and Jim Keadey, Coach Bob Groomer's diamondmen were very strong defensively as they finished the season with a 13-2 record.

Dean Sigler was the top batter for the frosh team. John Lacy and John Stegmoller were pitchers. Bob Rance did well as shortstop.

State laurels captured by Hicks, Larrison as climax of competition

With nine returning lettermen, the 1970 track season proved to be a winning one for Northwest.

In the state finals, Bill Hicks, who won more awards than any other athlete in the school's history, won the half mile with a time of 1:54.3. Mike Larrison, also an active athlete, won the shot put competition with a toss of 59' 8 3/4".

Even though the varsity squad had two state champs, it took the whole team to make the season good. Other returning lettermen were juniors Mike Tillery, 440 and 880-yard run, high jumper Alan Herring, and long distance runner Jeff King. Roy Byrd was a promising freshman competing in the long jump this year.

Fall carryover shows gain by racquetmen

Carrying over from the spring, the 1970 tennis team coached by Don Thompson wrapped up their season this fall.

The spring season, even though a bit discouraging for the squad, helped them build hope for the coming fall. The final spring record for the team was 1-16.

Taking an overall eighth in the sectional this fall, the winning competitors were Steve Clear, junior, who took number one in his first rounds. Terry Cain, senior, and Tim Olsen, junior, both who won doubles. Other participants in the sectional were Jim Blair, singles, Vernon Thompson and Jerry Douglas, second doubles. The final fall record was 1-2.

The addition of Jay Oaks '70, and seniors Mike Zoretich and Jim Reinstatler also proved helpful to Coach Jim Albright's team. The linksmen finished second in the city, eighth in the Bloomington Invitational, and seventh in the sectional. They also defeated North Central, which finished second in the State Tournament.

First-year Compton's gridders weather injuries, record setbacks

Success wasn't a commodity readily available to Northwest's new football coach, Larry Compton.

Coach Compton, building around only 13 returning lettermen from the 1969 team that posted a 2-8 record, saw his initial Space Pioneer gridiron team stumble to a 1-9 record.

Coach Compton lost more players because of injuries than he did football games, though. Even finding 11 healthy boys to start was sometimes a challenge. Quarterbacks were a dime a dozen — senior Mike Tillery, senior, Dave Cassell, and junior Randy McKinley shared the job as doctors permitted.

The season's only plus was a 20-0 victory over Wood. The minuses were many — the Space Pioneers were shut-out a record four times, could score a record low 48 points and gave up a record 50 points to Southport, which was also the Pioneers' worst setback in history.

Tillery was the team's top scorer, getting half of those 48 points.

JV, freshman teams push for winning image

Hopes for a winning season next year rested on the junior varsity and freshman football squads; both teams compiled winning slates for the season.

Opening the season against Broad Ripple, the junior varsity team scored an easy victory. Although defeated by Howe and Ben Davis, the final won-loss count for this year was 6-2. Several team members dressed for varsity action, including Mike Mutz, Greg Dunn, Ernest Byrd, James Hester, Rick Crouch, Bob Tillery and Mark Haab.

The freshmen also seemed to show organized play making on the field. Though they were barely beaten by Chatard and Washington, they scored high point victories over Wood and West Lane. The freshmen ended the season with a 5-4 record.

Underclassmen performances highlight cross country season

The 1970 varsity cross country team finished the fall season with an impressive 12-2 record. The harriers were led by senior Jeff King, juniors Steve Wilbur and Dale Murray, and sophomore Robert Blevins. Missed because of injuries this year were Bruce Kendall and Dale Murray. The team finished third in the city behind Tech and Manual. They also finished eighth in sectional competition. Out of the top seven runners, King was the only senior. This gives Coach Vernon McCarty an experienced team coming back next year.

Anthony Morton who was the city junior varsity champion helped the reserves gain a 4-5 season. The freshmen posted a 4-3 record led by Terry Myers who captured the freshman city laurels.

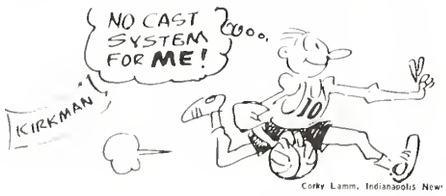
Lew Burns, Space Pioneers rewrite basket record book

Northwest's finest basketball season was climaxed with the Space Pioneers second straight sectional championship.

Not only was the 16-8 record the best in the school's history, but senior Lew Burns added his name to the record books in three places. The 6-foot-4 veteran became Northwest's first 1,000-point career scorer — and only the 37th in Indianapolis history — with 1,102 points. His 21.9 average in leading the Pioneers to their second straight Ben Davis Sectional crown was the highest in the school's history. His single-game high of 38 against Plainfield was also a new mark.

The team posted other records. Its 72.9 offensive average was the highest, its 103 points and 41-point margin against Broad Ripple were new marks.

Coach Bill Ritter's club entered the city tourney with the best record (9-1) in the field, but injuries to floor general Mike Kirkman and illness to Dick Beuke dampened any title hopes. The Pioneers were eliminated by Cathedral in the second round.



With the two regulars sidelined, the team lost six of its next seven games. They rebounded, however, in the closing weeks of the season.

The Pioneers beat Speedway for the sectional title. It was the first meeting between the two schools despite the fact they're neighbors.

Underclassmen teams strive to learn, excell

Losing only to the Attucks Tigers, the junior varsity basketball squad ran up an impressive 18-2 record. With hopes of bettering their last year's performance, the reserves entered the city tourney undefeated, only to lose to Attucks in the final game. Led by Dale Taylor's 14 points per game, the team averaged 52.3 points offensively and 43.5 defensively. Coach Bob Groomer said of his group, "This is certainly the finest JV squad in NHS history."

The freshman cagers won seven out of 19 games on their schedule, including a victory over Broad Ripple, in the city tourney. They were eliminated in the semifinal round by the eventual champions, Arlington. The first-year squad's wins included victories over Washington, Manual, and Attucks.

Carl May wins sectional mat championship

Competition with such powers as Ben Davis, Carmel and two-time state champ Bloomington accounted for the Northwest varsity grapplers' 4-8 record. Individual performances such as Carl May's sectional crown and Steve Collin's city title could not improve the team's regular season activity.

The junior varsity squad fared better though the efforts of juniors Gary Weir and Tim Johnson. Ending the year 7-5, the reserves placed third in the city tournament.

Promising freshman Brent Carter moved up from the frosh squad to wrestle varsity where he won in his first sectional match. The rest of the freshmen gained valuable experience in their 2-6 season.

Promoting more 'Pioneer Power' ambition of NHS cheerleaders

Cheering the NHS crowds at football and basketball games and leading school pep sessions were duties of the varsity, reserve and freshmen cheerleaders. Selling spirit badges and hanging signs were activities the girls did to boost school spirit.

As in past years, the cheerleaders received awards for their service on the squad. Freshmen cheerleaders received a green megaphone pin for their first year, and reserves received a gold megaphone charm for their first and/or second year. For their first year, varsity cheerleaders were given a white blazer jacket, and for their second year on the varsity squad they received a cheerleader pin with a gold megaphone on it. To be judged eligible for these awards, the girls must have followed the rules and regulations set forth for them by sponsor Mrs. Mary Jo Ward.

Intramurals highlight athletic program for all

For the first time at Northwest any boy who had the desire could participate on a basketball team.

Thirty-two teams entered into the new intramural basketball program. Eleven junior-senior teams and 21 freshman - sophomore teams involved more than 300 boys.

Twice a week teachers Robert Burns, Peter Davis, and Rex Hedegard devoted their time to enable this program.

After the final games of the intramural elimination tournament, CCRs of the junior-senior league and the Rim Benders of the freshman-sophomore league won the championship.

Learning the necessity of working together as a team and how to react under pressure taught each boy who participated to accept the joys of success and the agonies of defeat.

Contending that athletics should be open to anyone interested, a group of girls initiated the Girls' Gymnastic program sponsored by Mrs. Mary Jo Ward. In this program beginning girls had a chance to learn about gymnastics and advanced girls had the opportunity to improve their skills. (above) With the aid of Mrs. Mary Jo Ward, Toni Brown and Lorna Davis (left) get a big flip out of the parallel bars.

Athletic spirit carried on by other NHSers

In addition to major sports, the athletic department provided students with a variety of activities that enabled them to feel the spirit of athletic competition.

Competing with fellow students, the members of the two bowling leagues learned to improve their techniques by practice. Each of the 28 teams consisted of two boys and two girls. Seventy-five trophies were awarded to the highest scoring individuals and teams in a spring banquet.

While bowling activities took place at the Eagle Bowl, student managers were busy at their work in the NHS gym. Many hours each week were devoted to maintaining the good condition of the athletic equipment, distributing the equipment during the practices and games, and supporting the teams with their confidence.

Lettermen were awarded sweaters to symbolize their achievements as well as their pride to serve Northwest through participation in sports.

Clubs

Participation in school clubs and activities opened the doors for individual expression of particular interests. Through these after school activities, students learned to get along with others in a more relaxed atmosphere.

New clubs were formed to meet interests not covered before such as the Business Activities Club and the Spelunking Club. The Future Teachers of America accelerated their activities to allow more involvement.

Band blasts out with enthusiasm for NHS events

New uniforms for the 104-member Marching Band and 36 Silverettes proved to be a spirit booster for other Pioneers.

After several weeks of late, summer practice, the band started the 1970-71 season by performing in the city football jamboree, August 29.

In addition to marching at all home football games, the band also participated in the Indiana High School Music Association contest in October, receiving a first place, division A.

Other band activities included performing in the half-time show a Butler game in November and marching in the Veteran's Day parade downtown, November 11.

Concert groups show variety, skill, pride

Northwest welcomed James Kantarze as the new director of the concert choir. Conversely, Darrel Horton, conductor of the concert band, began his eighth year in the music department.

The 70-member Concert Choir sang a variety of songs from religious and folk to show and pop tunes. In addition to performing for NHS students, the choir also sang to St. Andrews Presbyterian Church, Christmas on the Circle, and in the All-City Choir Festival.

The Concert Band, featuring mainly classical and show tunes, also attracted listeners. Their concerts included a Christmas and spring concert.

Groups perk-up presentations with specialized musical talents

Singled out for their musical abilities and talents, members of the Belles, Swing Choir, and Stage Band performed at various concerts and assemblies throughout the year.

Supervised by Mr. James Kantarze, the Belles, a 14-girl ensemble, worked to perfect voice clarity and physical mannerisms. Their programs included performances at the Children's Museum, Lafayette Square, and the Cerebral Palsy Clinic.

Less formal than the Belles, the Swing Choir concentrated more on Jazz and pop music. The 25 members made up of both boys and girls were also directed by Mr. Kantarze. Their songs were accompanied by a guitar, piano, and drums. In addition to engagements on various community stages, the group also sang on the Circle and presented the spring Jazz Concert.

Playing two numbers alone and three with the Butler Stage Band at Cloewes Hall highlighted the year for the NHS Stage Band. The band performed in the Jazz Concert and was the nucleus of the orchestra for "Oklahoma!"

Aided by director Darrel Horton, many boys wrote their own arrangements.

Unlimited variety of sounds flow from ensembles

Orchestra and Concert Club provided an oportunity for Pioneers to become acquainted with different facets of musical education.

The orchestra combined wind and string instruments resulting in a well balanced sound. Performances included the Christmas, Awards, and Spring concerts.

Concert Club consisted of sixty girls who presented vocal numbers ranging from contemporary to classical tunes.

Some orchestra members participated in the All State Solo and Ensemble Contest while both groups participated in the Organizational Contest.

NHS Thespians, Players work own Broadway

Dramatic activities throughout the year gave Northwest Pioneer Players and Thespians a chance to view the stage from a different angle.

Pioneer Players was a training group whose members were taught the fundamentals of costuming, makeup and general back - stage hints. Outstanding Pioneer Players became members of Thespians Troupe 2625, after accumulating 12 points.

Stage manager Jed Jamison, junior, supervised all back-stage activities. Stage crew members were a vital factor in production.

Thespian-directed one-act plays gave Pioneer Players an opportunity to act in a variety of roles and to understand the responsibilities of a director.

All dramatic activities were advised by Miss Phyllis Walters.

Creative communications media has no limits in sight, sound

Communication seemed to be an important word this year. By means of electronics, writing, and speaking, Northwest students were able to communicate in various ways.

Through Speech Club activities, students were given an opportunity to practice different aspects of poetry reading, impromptu and extemporaneous speaking, debate, radio and television experience, and dramatic interpretation. Club members participated in contests sponsored by the Indiana State Speech Association and the American Legion.

Northwest Passages provided students with an annual anthology of their poems and compositions written in English class. The Passages staff consisted entirely of students and was advised by Mrs. Doris Bradford.

The football and basketball teams were able to see themselves in action on films made by the Audio-Visual Club. Members learned the use of the audio-visual equipment by taping games and rehearsals of performances by the Thespians and Pioneer Players.

Foreign studies spiced by tacos, escargots, pasta

Northwest language clubs participated in various continental activities while learning foreign customs and languages.

The Spanish Club newspaper began its third year of publication, reporting such club activities as open house, a style show, and eating at a Mexican restaurant.

Latin Club members learned prayers, songs, and the Lord's prayer in the language of ancient Rome.

Chez Jean, a French Restaurant south of Indianapolis, was the scene of the French Club's major activity. The trip to the restaurant is a regular event for French students.

Miss Mary Lou Steed supervised the reorganization of the German Club. The club sponsored a membership drive to attract new members in hopes of having a larger, more active club.

Publications present accurate picture of total school concerns

Although the Telstar staff began the year almost totally inexperienced, they successfully covered the events of the year.

The Telstar received the All-American citation from the National Scholastic Press Association for the 1970 spring semester, recognizing the newspaper for excellence in reporting and interpretation of Northwest High School.

Under the editorship of Theresa Nichols, fall editor, and Carol Stengel, spring editor, the newspaper covered student viewpoints, student-faculty accomplishments, and entertained both students and faculty alike.

The efforts of student journalists were rewarded when they attended Marion County Press Day in January at Broad Ripple High School.

Three staffers captured first-place trophies, while seven others received second or third-place certificates.

Vanguard views hectic, colorful changing year

Special color effects, more modern layouts and more pages characterized the changes in the 1971 Vanguard.

The Vanguard staff was the largest ever, with 22 members selected by Mrs. Gwen Mannweiler, adviser.

Work began during the summer when Pam Shields and Wendi Pierson, seniors, and Steve Gano, junior, attended the summer journalism workshop at Ball State University.

Root Studios of Chicago was contracted for the first time to handle all professional yearbook photography.

Serving others spurs Society's special projects

At an evening program attended by parents, 37 new members were inducted into the Northwest Chapter of the National Honor Society. These students were given the opportunity to serve NHS through service to others.

Voluntary tutoring of fellow students, helping in the library, and ushering after-school activities were services provided by the members.

Toys, books, and clothing were taken to Central State Hospital at Christmas time. These articles were collected by Society members.

Helping others also helped the members to understand the meaning of the Honor Society goals of leadership, scholarship, service, and character.

Council proves change can be initiated orderly

The NHS Student Council found they could encourage acceptance of new policy by making clear their demands. This was shown by the Council's handling of the revised dress code.

To emphasize the effectiveness of order, the Cabinet activated a two-day session in which council members learned parliamentary procedure and Robert's Rules of Order. With these standards the students carried out other business. Homecoming activities, the Turkey Drive, after game dances, and School spirit promotion were all part of the Council's busy year.

Muddy, dark realm snares avid spelunkers

Getting to school by 8:00 a.m. weighted down with flashlights, carbide lamps, and helmets was not everyone's idea of a perfect Saturday. But to the few brave Pioneers who did not mind the dark, muddy caves, it was heaven.

There were occasional incidents of carbide lamps catching fire, but they were not serious. In Keyhole Cave, however, two spelunkers were chased by disturbed bats.

The more experienced cavers went to Wayne, Keyhole, and Donahoe Caves, while those just beginning explored Sullivan Cave.

(above) Even after traipsing through mud and squeezing through tight passages, Mary Phillips, senior, climbs out of Eller's Cave smiling. (top) Unlike other clubs, the Spelunking ing Club has many teacher sponsors. Teachers who most frequently accompany students are Don Thompson, James Albright, Stan Irwin, Russell Green, and Rex Hedegard.

Brainy combat faces knowledge team members

A wide background of general knowledge, quick recall and reflex were requirements for members of the NHS Exercise in Knowledge team.

The team was sponsored by Miss Sue Ritter, an English teacher, who chose the members for their ability to answer questions in the areas of English, science, math, social studies, and the arts. The team competed against other high schools in Marion County and the surrounding areas.

Future teachers eye erasers, apples, exams

With approximately 25 members, the Future Teachers of America Club was continually active in school affairs.

The club sponsored the "Decorate the Bricks," contest to create more school spirit for Homecoming.

Members were kept busy by helping teachers grade papers, ushering at NPT meetings, and composing a new freshmen handbook.

For the first time, members made food baskets for needy families and collected money for victims of Multiple Sclerosis.

Special speakers spark business club programs

Guest speakers and field trips were features of some meetings of the Business Activities Club sponsored by Mrs. Donna Grubbs.

At one meeting, Mr. James Bolin from the NHS Business Department showed slides that he had taken on his vacation to Mexico. Indiana Bell Telephone Company representatives spoke on applying for a job. Mr. Randolph Bradley of the Indiana Central Business College discussed the advantages of attending the Indianapolis college.

Field trips included tour of the Indianapolis Art Museum and a visit to an Indiana General Assembly session.

Classes

Concentration in classes helped students arm themselves for the demands of a complicated time. Knowledge of many courses gave them the opportunity to not only form but also change their interests and values.

Focus was on an expressive aspect of learning in English and social studies classes with independent projects and group discussions of contemporary novels and events.

Creativity, contemporary novels supplement literary development

In addition to English, drama, speech, and journalism, two new courses supplemented the curriculum creative writing and modern literature. These were added to permit students to choose from a greater variety of English courses.

Seniors with a flair for composition enrolled in the creative writing class. Here they listened to tapes, viewed movies and drew pictures. From these they wrote themes relating to their impressions.

Modern literature students read and studied the works of contemporary authors such as We Have Always Lived In The Castle by Shirley Jackson, The Bear by William Faulkner, and Noon Wine by Katherine Anne Porter.

Students in the drama and speech classes strengthened their verbal communications through participation in stage performances and classroom talks.

Journalists learned techniques of newspaper writing and news interpretation as well as yearbook and newspaper production.

Pioneers study urban, national, world problems

Trying to develop an understanding of American domestic and international relations were goals of the social studies department.

Led by Mr. Ralph Horn, the department offered the customary courses of world history, U.S. history and government. Also available were sociology, psychology, international relations and a new class called metropolitan government which dealt with the problems that develop in urban living.

Eleven seniors entered the Lily Scholarship Contest. To be eligible for entrance, they had to be social studies majors ranking in the top fourth of their class. The contestants wrote research papers and were interviewed about their papers by a committee of history teachers.

To her Spanish students, Miss Sondra James stresses the proper enunciation of words.

Languages endeavor to acquaint Pioneers with various customs

Beginning with basic dialogue followed by grammar and literature, students studying a foreign language gained not only academic training, but also insight into other people of the world. By becoming acquainted with the native tongue of another country, the students also learned its culture, geography, history and customs. In preparation for college or a future vocation, Pioneers studied Spanish, German, French, Latin and derivatives.

German students who wished to go further in a foreign language enrolled in the new German V and VI class. There were also more Spanish students in the advanced Spanish IX and X class than there had been previously.

French students Mary Huber, senior, and Jim Smith, sophomore, transmitted their knowledge in French by teaching class at various times. Jim also attended French camp at Pokagon Park in Angola, Ind., as did Donna Cullings, sophomore, and Valerie Berry, freshman.

(far below) Calculus imprints a problem on the mind of Scott Swanson, senior, as he attempts to find the correct solution.

Fundamentals to high calculus, math covers all

Several new courses were added to Northwest's math curriculum. General Math III and IV were added for students who needed more math training before taking algebra. Unified math combined trigonometry and college algebra for students of higher mathematics.

The computer math class linked their computer to a closer and less costly position. Before, the main computer was stationed in Cincinnati; this year the source was in downtown Indianapolis. The computer math class planned a visit to the site where the computer was connected.

Many of the mathematics students participated in the Math Association of America Contest, Franklin College Day, and Marion County Math Day.

Science basics inform students of their world

Dissecting animals preserved in formaldehyde, watching electrons jump through the air, and observing micro-organisms under a microscope were just some of the routine activities of the Science Department.

Students completing Biology I and II had the opportunity for the first time to take Biology III and IV.

As all students were required one year of science, it was the hope of the Science Department head, Mr. Robert Canner, that the students had acquainted themselves with the basics of science, prepared themselves for further education in college, and informed themselves of their world's makeup.

Fine arts reveal Pioneers' inner ideals, conflicts

Appreciation and development of musical and artistic abilities were stressed in the art and music departments.

In art classes students learned and applied the principles and elements of good design through projects in craft arts, jewelry, ceramics, commercial art, and lettering. Various students displayed their creative works in the hall and lobby near the auditorium. Selected works were entered in the "500" Festival of the Arts, while other students' work received Gold Key awards.

Music interests ranged from the pop tunes of the Stage Band and Swing Choir to Concert Choir's Messiah. The groups not only sang and played but also learned basic fundamentals of music. Students also had the opportunity to enroll in music theory, a detailed course on many aspects of music. With the use of closed circuit television, the various ensembles viewed their performances. From the mistakes they observed, they were better able to correct their sound.

D.E. program provides actual job experience

Although no business courses were required at Northwest, 1,700 out of 2,700 students elected one of the many business courses offered.

A new vocational program, distributive education, was available to those interested in the fields of sales and merchandising. Students enrolled in distributive education spent half the day in school and the other half on the job, gaining experience in whatever field of sales they were interested. Mr. William Pert directed this new program.

Two speakers, Miss Pat Jones and Miss Ruth Murphy from Shaw-Walker Company, manufacturer of filing equipment, spoke to bookkeeping and data processing classes about the payroll plan.

New courses give better training for life in the home, on the job

Human sexuality and man's role in his environment was the new emphasis in the co-educational course of family living when a special sex educational unit was added.

Clothing classes provided NHS girls a chance to make and model their sewing projects. Preparing a full course meal for a faculty member was the requirement for advanced foods classes.

The industrial arts department taught students to master the machinery and skills of several vocations. The classes were slightly similar to those of a vocational school only with shorter periods.

A new class, electronics and TV repair, instructed Pioneers in detecting and repairing TV mal-functions. Students used the actual equipment used by TV repairmen.

ROTC strives for discipline, self confidence

Reserve Officers' Training Corps provided an opportunity for boys to learn the organization, history and function of the various armed forces. Not only preparing for future military service, ROTC students learned to demonstrate self confidence and leadership.

Striving for high awards, the drill team worked to pertect their marching techniques for exhibitions. Also for competition honors, the rifle team consentrated on improving their shooting accuracy.

The ROTC sponsors assisted in inspections, performed clerical tasks and tried to recruit students to select ROTC. They also planned the Military Ball which climaxed the year.

Development of minds, bodies aim of Physical Ed

The physical education department at Northwest consisted of girls and boys gym classes, health and driver's education.

Students who worked on the gym apparatus learned both coordination and timing. Occasionally, the boys and girls classes combined to practice the dance steps they had learned.

The health classes placed a greater emphasis upon the ever-increasing drug abuse problem. Mrs. Lillian Resnick, school nurse, participated in the health program by administering tuberculin shots to students in health classes.

Although not a required course, driver's education enrollment was large. Those who took driver's education drove for nine weeks and attended classes, and were assigned to a study hall the remaining nine weeks.

Library offers leisure reading, research materials, video tapes

A peaceful setting in which reports and term papers could be written and magazines could be read is what the library offered to NHS students.

With the help of 33 pupils and several teacher assistants, librarians Mrs. Phyllis Casselman and Mrs. Jeanne Hollingsworth supervised activities of the Northwest library.

With the endless number of categories of books to choose from, the library offered something for everyone's reading habits. Books on selected subjects could be found by any student with the help of a librarian or an assistant.

The library also used audio-visual methods in its continuing goal to fulfill the scholastic and vocational needs of the students. Through use of the video tapes, the library oriented freshmen with the proper use of the facilities in the library.

Counselors help students choose courses, careers

Four counselors, Mrs. Arwilda Burton, Mr. Peter Davis, Mr. Richard O'Brien and Dr. Gilbert Shuck aided students in selecting the proper courses for their particular vocations. Mr. Richard Cummins counseled the Senior Class in addition to his responsibilities as director of the guidance services.

Two special assemblies, College Day and Careers Day, were offered as aids in helping Pioneers select a college and also to allow them to attend sessions on careers they found interesting.

Homeroom teachers helped students by setting up conferences with their respective counselors whenever a scheduling problem arose.

Two others, Mrs. Jane Poposki, Northwest's social worker, and Mrs. Grace Shieh, the NHS psychologist, dealt with special student problems when necessary.

Administrators, faculty pursue exciting extracurricular events

In addition to their time-consuming jobs at school, the administration and faculty found time for their own extracurricular activities.

One such activity was the teacher's picnic September 12. Two hundred turned out for the trip sponsored by Miss Diane Hibbeln, Dean of Girls.

Teachers wanting to "get away from it all" took to Florida for their Christmas vacations. Others donned helmets to sponser a spelunking trip to Corydon, Indiana.

Mr. Don Thompson planned a skiing trip for the teachers to Bellefontaine, Ohio, January 31.

The year ended with the faculty's annual smorgasboard in the spring.

People

Characterization of each person was a complex, continuing process. New experiences, new relationships helped each student learn about varying views and actions and form what he felt was the best set of standards for himself.

Boys could wear their hair longer; girls had more freedom of dress; each student could plan his own course of study; each could affiliate with any extracurricular group. Each NHS student could be himself.

Seniors discover life begins after 'commencement'

Eating first in lunch, Senior Dress-Up Day, bonfire, graduation exercises, first junior-senior prom, setting examples for underclassmen . . . these typified the end and yet the beginning for the class of 1971.

Upon graduation, seniors faced the responsibility of finding a job, selecting a college, or getting married, each doing what he chose as best for him. As time goes by, seniors will have gone their separate ways. Years later, when seniors have found their own kind of happiness, they will look back at their beginning and eating first in lunch, Senior Dress-Up Day . . .

"Which way will it go?" wonders center Lew Burns, senior, as he waits for the rebound in the first game of the city tourney.

Junior class moves to upperclass status with special events, ideas

Realizing that they were entering the last half of high school, members of the junior class specialized in subject areas such as math, science, business and vocational courses to prepare for the future. Career and College Days where speakers talked to the students about their area gave juniors an opportunity to get a glimpse at what they might pursue. For those college bound, PSAT test were taken as a step toward admittance.

On the social side of the year for the first time at NHS the juniors shared a prom with the senior class in June. The joint dance was proposed by the students and passed by the student council so that the affair could be larger and more lavish. Club meetings, sports, friends, and work for many completed the busy year.

Sophs discover world of things for involvement

With 789 students, the largest class at Northwest, sophomores strove to attain their identity by becoming more involved in activities not available to them as freshmen. In classes, sophomores discovered they could observe living organisms by disecting such things as frogs and worms in biology; in geometry they discovered new aspects in math.

The purchasing of class rings was an important decision for the Class of '73. It reminded them that while being faced with new responsibilities and challenges, they were preparing to enter the next step on their way to graduation.

Frosh quickly adjust to new ways of NHS

Jamming his locker, approaching his desk from the wrong side when the bell rings, asking an upperclassman which way to go and being sent to the fictional elevator, searching in his green handbook for the right rule—this is a Northwest freshman.

Each of the 21 freshman homerooms elected a Student Council representative. Four cheerleaders and one alternate, chosen from among the 764-member class, represented them at football and basketball games.

Many freshman learned that being a student at NHS was something to be proud of and began his high school career with anticipation.

When I was a freshman in English, I learned that conflict or opposition in a story made it more interesting. It was just another fact so I forgot it.

When I was a sophomore, art taught me that opposition in a design made it better looking. It boosted my grade but wasn't worth remembering.

When I became a junior, chemistry told me that opposite ions attract to form a bond. But I only remembered that long enough to pass the test.

But now I am a senior and I see a whole different picture . . . I see opposites: Black and White, Good and Bad Hard times and Easy times. Though I sometimes wonder how much I really remember of what my classes taught me, about opposites, I do know that school life in its entirety has taught me some things about opposites that aren't easy to forget.

I've seen what opposites do when they get together. I've seen good students helping poor ones, friendly people greeting shy ones, Black students with White students, all working together and helping each other, communicating to find a solution.

As in English, the opposites of NHS made my story more interesting. As in art, opposites made the design of my high school days more colorful. And as in chemistry, opposites attracted to form bonds not easily broken.

When I think back to my high school days, I don't see just the facts and figures that I learned. I see that my hours in school taught me to lead a better life. NHS brought together many of the opposites found in life and together, with these ideas, we began forming our own opposition, our own style of communication, and our own solutions.
